

The first licence allowing farmers in England to shoot badgers in an attempt to reduce cattle TB has been issued.

One of the government's most respected science advisers has described this as a "crazy scheme" that may have little advantage and suggests vaccination and biosecurity as a better route to follow.

The first culling will be in Gloucestershire and is due to begin within weeks; Somerset is to follow. With this happening right on our doorstep we felt the need to express our opinion. This logo is the result.

Please feel free to download the logo and use in any way you please.

Stop
the cull

Please feel free to download the logo and use in any way you please.